INDIAN GIRLS ON BATTLEFIELD

Sixteen Girls from Carlisle School Visit Gettysburg. Several Tourist Parties with Prominent People Spending a Day here.

Sixteen dusky Indian maidens from the school at Carlisle arrived in Gettysburg this morning and were the object of much attention all day. Dr. Harley Sharp, of Philadelphia, is in charge of the party.

It included Indians from Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Minnesota while there was one resident of the Philippines with them. They had been in town scarcely ten minutes before all made a dash for a souvenir postal card stand and invested heavily in the cards which they at once dispatched to their relatives in far away states while, it is rumored, not a few of the little reminders were sent to the "boy they left behind" when they came east to learn the ways of civilization.

The average age of the visitors was between eighteen and twenty and several unusually pretty girls were among the number. The greater portion of the morning and afternoon was spent on the battlefield and the return to Carlisle was made on the afternoon train at four o'clock. Dinner was taken at the Eagle Hotel.

A party of prominent persons registered at the Eagle Hotel to-day included Mrs. A. R. Peacock, Miss Peacock, of Pittsburgh; R. B. Peacock, of St. Louis; Miss Gibson, of Edinburgh, Scotland; Dr. Alexander Gibson, of Winnipeg, Manitoba; and J. R. Mills, of New Orleans.

Horace Lippincott and Hueling Lippincott, well known Philadelphians, are registered at the Hotel Gettysburg to-day together with Edward Worth, Horace Keesey and Arthur Bond, of York.

A party of twelve veterans from New York City and Northern New Jersey registered at the Eagle Hotel to-day. With them were Major J. B. Horner and Major J. W. Jacobs.

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Frazier, John E. Zimmerman, Howard Handell Jr., and Charles E. Richard, of Philadelphia, composed an automobile tourist party that registered at the Eagle Hotel to-day.

ACCIDENTS

Two Children Have Broken Bones. One Taken to Hospital.

The four year old son of Richard Thomas, of Gettysburg, was taken to the York Hospital on Friday suffering from a jaw bone broken in two places by the kick of a horse, which the child received while playing in a field where the horse was eating grass.

Blanche Zimmerman, five year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Zimmerman, residing about three miles east of Gettysburg, had both legs broken when a bale of hay fell against her. The one leg was broken at the ankle and the other at the hip.

Evelyn Carter daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Carter, of South Washington street, met with a painful accident Friday evening about six o'clock at the playground. Her little cousin was swinging when the Carter child ran in the front of the moving swing and received a severe cut below the right eye.

MOCK WEDDING A BIG SUCCESS

Young People Go through Every Detail of an Elaborate Church Wedding to Great Delight of a Large Audience.

The President and Mrs. Wilson, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. William Howard Taft and many other dignitaries attended the Tom Thumb wedding in St. James Chapel Friday evening and contributed to one of the most attractive home talent entertainments Gettysburg has seen for a long time.

As the guests were announced and the little people took their places, awaiting the ceremony which should unite "in the iron bonds of padlock" Sir Harold Roth Tom Thumb and Miss Ida Hartley June, the audience entered thoroughly into the spirit of the event and the wedding was carried out so much in imitation of the real thing that applause at its conclusion seemed out of place.

Dogwood featured the decorations and the participants were all in full evening dress, the "ladies" wearing gowns with long trains with their hair dressed in most approved fashion, while the "gentlemen" wore full dress, correct in every particular according to the latest dictates of fashion.

Four miniature ushers met the guests at the door, took them to the stage and announced such dignitaries as those above given while the McAdams, the Sayres and many others, including a small imitation of Rev. and Mrs. Joseph B. Baker, were also in the number. Miss Lorene M. Roth played the Lohengrin march as the bridal procession entered the chapel. The officiating clergyman, "Rev." David Tawney, Bishop of Bonneville, entered the center aisle of the chapel and the four ushers followed.

The bridesmaids followed wearing pretty gowns of pink with lace caps. They carried phlox. Two pretty little flower girls scattered pansies in the path of the party as they proceeded up the aisle and Master William Mickle, all in white, carried on a small pillow the padlock which should unite the happy couple for ever. Miss Katharyne Reaser, the maid of honor, wore a beautiful gown of pink, made en train and she carried white lilies. The bride, "on the arm of her father", was gown'd in white with a long veil. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

From the chancel door entered the bridegroom and his best man and the ones about to be joined took their places beneath an arch and bell of dogwood blossoms. After urging any one having any valid objections to the proceeding to let themselves be heard or ever after "mum's the word", the officiating minister proceeded with the ceremony. Many bright little ideas were embodied in the mock marriage and its conclusion was marked by vigorous approval on the part of the large audience. The Mendelssohn march was used as the recessional. At the close of the evening a flashlight was taken of the entire company. Preceding the wedding a brief but attractive program of recitations and music was given, and immediately before the bridal procession appeared Miss Evelyn Trimmer, introduced as "Madam Sylva", sang.

The affair was given by the Mission Band of the church, of which Miss Belle Bream is superintendent, and about $53 was cleared.

PLAY SEVENTEEN INNING CONTEST

Hoar Holds Ursinus Batters Safe and Game Ends in a Tie. Opposing Pitcher Struck out Twenty Seven Men. Perfect Fielding.

With Eddie Plank and Jack Coombs, veteran pitchers of the world's champion Athletics, looking on, Ursinus and Gettysburg played seventeen innings to a deadlock in the most spectacular baseball game ever staged on Patterson Field, Collegeville. When Umpire Griffith called the game on account of darkness the score stood 1 to 1.

Johnson, the Ursinus spit-ball wonder, and Hoar, for Gettysburg, engaged in a thrilling pitchers' battle. Johnson had the better of the argument, holding the Battlefield boys to six hits and striking out twenty-seven men. Hoar, however, twirled a heady game and kept the eleven hits well scattered. He had eleven strikeouts and he allowed seven passes while Johnson gave only one.

Ursinus had several chances to win the game, but failed by poor base running. Bream, for Gettysburg, saved the game several times for his team by fielding drives that looked like homers. All told he had seven put outs to his credit.

Gettysburg's score came in the third inning, when Hall walked and counted on Hoar's two-base hit to right field. After that Johnson mowed down the batters in order. He pitched the last fourteen innings without a run being scored.

Ursinus scored in the sixth, when Mitterling walked and on the hit and run scored when Mitterling singled. Gettysburg played an errorless game. Williams had four outs and nine assists; Ikeler four outs and five assists.

Plank and Coombs were looking over Johnson. After the game Coombs, who is scouting for the Athletics, it is said, made Johnson an offer to join the big leaguers.

The Carlisle Street base ball team defeated the Baltimore Street club this morning 10 to 3. The first game of the series was won by Baltimore Street 9 to 8.

DEMAND TO KNOW FATE OF SOLDIER

Huerta Told Withholding Facts is Hostile Act.

IT IS SAID HE WAS EXECUTED

State Department's Demand on Huerta
May Explain Why Conference of Mediators Has Been Postponed.

Washington, May 16.—The Mexican situation took a most serious turn when the United States government informed the Huerta government that it considers the withholding of information concerning the fate of Samuel Parks, a private in the Twenty-eighth Infantry, a hostile act.

The notice to the Huerta government came through Secretary of State Bryan, by way of the state department. It was addressed to Provisional President Huerta and the Mexican Federal authorities direct. So far as is known, no notice of the United States government's attitude in the case was communicated to the Huerta government's representative in Washington or to the "A. B. C." powers trying to bring about mediation of the trouble between this country and the de facto government in Mexico.

Parks, who went to Mexico with General Funston's troops, has been missing for a week or more. Acting as orderly for Colonel Taggart, of the Twenty-eighth Infantry, he rode out one day to exercise two horses. He is supposed to have become insane from the heat, and penetrated the Mexican lines outside Vera Cruz. Nothing official has been learned about him since that time.

A correspondent sent a dispatch saying he had reliable information that Parks had been seized by General Maas' men, and after a farcical trial by a drum head court, executed. This information was subsequently corroborated by other press dispatches.

The war department, through Secretary Garrison, called on General Funston for a full report of the case. So far as is known, no report had come from General Funston.

"The case has passed the investigation stage," said Secretary Garrison, "and we are now assuming that Parks is either a prisoner or has been killed."

The representations, he said, are in the nature of a protest "against an unfriendly or hostile act," and added that the state department is acting in behalf of the war department in the matter.

It was rumored in Washington that the government's representations in the Parks case might account for delay in the plans for mediation. Opening of the conference at Niagara Falls on Monday was postponed until Wednesday. The "official explanation" of this delay was that there was no desire to "hurry" the Huerta delegates. There are persistent rumors that another reason was lack of the delay.

A report to Vera Cruz said that a part of the Mexican City garrison had mutinied, slain several officers and fled from the city.

Apparently the feeling is general among all in Vera Cruz that the next few days will see a tumult of revolt in the capital, since a movement into the districts was planned to occur only when the situation became critical and self-protection an absolute necessity.

British, German and Austrian residents of Mexico City are concentrating for mutual defense. They are reported as expecting tumults or open revolt against Huerta within a few days.

The Mexican gunboats Bravo and Zaragoza have sailed from Tampico, closely followed by United States warships, which will keep constant watch on them. They are expected to return and blockade Tampico, which may cause international complications.

ZAPATA NEAR MEXICO CITY

Mutiny Reported in Capital and Foreigners Concentrate For Defense.

Vera Cruz, May 16.—Credible private advices from Mexico City report that the Federals at Topilejo, eight miles south of the capital, were attacked by the Zapatistas.

The incident is regarded as an important development by the authorities in Vera Cruz. Zapata's men had come up from the south unexpectedly and had taken possession of the summit of Mount Ajusco. The Federals, who had gone out to drive them back, were compelled to charge up a steep slope and were decidedly at a disadvantage. Zapata had no artillery and the Federals could not use any.

So far as could be learned, Zapata was simply making a demonstration of his power to get to the capital and inspire terror among the inhabitants, rather than seeking a decisive action. His men are all mounted and can withdraw without difficulty to the south when they have accomplished what they have set out to do.

Further trouble was indicated by reports said to have come by courier from Paso del Macho that some of Huerta's troops in Mexico City had already revolted.

The troops involved in the mutiny were said to be those quartered in the Piedad barracks, near the center of the city. Several officers were reported to have been murdered by the mutineers.

Before loyal troops could be brought a plie mutineers fled from the city.

NEW REVOLUTION ALREADY PLANNED

Diaz May Lead a Revolt if Huerta is Ousted.

Vera Cruz, May 16.—The prospects of the speedy fall of Provisional President Huerta, now that the Constitutionalist have taken Tampico, has resulted in a number of new rebel movements which are being hatched here.

Little knots of politicians are to be seen in every cafe speaking in whispers of secret juntas and hidden headquarters of revolutionary activity.

The latest movement is a revival of the Felix Diaz propaganda. Diaz, who is believed to be in the United States, has taken no part in the Constitutionalist movement, nor has he given it any sympathy. Consequently he is not looked upon as a friend by either Carranza or Villa. Diaz belongs to a group "less conservative" than the faction of Huerta, but more so than the Constitutionalist.

The most influential supporters of Diaz were exiled or imprisoned by Huerta, but they are expected to return, now that Huerta's end seems near.

A dapper, secretive Mexican came to Vera Cruz from the capital and held a long conference with General Desha, former governor of the state of Vera Cruz. He described himself as the private secretary to Rodolfo Reyes, former minister of justice, and a member of the combination that overthrew Madero. Senor Desha is a Mexican of the old school and was governor of Vera Cruz during the presidency of Porfirio Diaz.

U. S. AFRAID, MEXICAN BELIEF

Philadelphian Tells of Insults to Women and Flag.

BURN OLD GLORY IN STREET

Party of Eighteen Lined Up by Soldiers and Forced to Witness Degradation of Flag.

Philadelphia, May 16.—Tales of insults to American women, degradation to the American flag and threats of death to citizens of the United States in Mexico were brought to this city by Michael J. Slattery, when he reached the home of his father-in-law Thomas McFarland, with his wife and two young sons, after a flight from Guadalajara, Mexico.

Mr. Slattery has been in Mexico for twelve years, developing a large mining property. It was on April 29, he said, that the American consul at Guadalajara called the Americans together there and told them that Secretary Bryan had advised all Americans to leave Mexico.

"One of the richest merchants in Guadalajara tore the United States coat of arms from its place above the door of the American consulate. He fastened a rope to the emblem, and mounting his horse, dashed across the plaza of the city, dragging the battered insignia of this nation at his horse's heels. The crowds cheered and applauded wildly.

"At Colima we learned that he had forty-eight hours to leave the country. We paid $350 for a special train to the coast, and reached Manzanillo on Thursday. There we found the American consulate deserted. The consul had taken refuge on a German steamship, but General Revere, the governor of Manzanillo, refused to let us follow. But there a bribe worked too. Eleven hundred dollars was furnished before the general found that he had the necessary 'authority' to let us go.

"We started for the wharf. There the women and children were sent off but we were detained and robbed. When all but eighteen of us men had gone there was a report that an American warship was coming up the harbor. Then we were marched over to the railroad station. General Revere told us that if the warship anchored in the harbor he would shoot us.

"We eighteen men were lined up in a semi-circle. Four hundred troops with guns leveled at us stood at our backs. Several of Rivera's aides there brought out three big American flags which they had torn from the walls of the consulate a few minutes before.

"The flags were spread upon the ground, and then a dozen mounted soldiers rode across them at a furious pace, spitting violently upon them and otherwise desecrating them. We had to see it. If one of us dared to close his eyes a ready young officer pricked us with his sword point.

"Then the three flags were clustered in a heap. An officer set a match to the pile and they burned quickly. Then the same officer stooped and gathered up a handful of the ashes.

"He walked over to me and threw them in my face, laughing. At the same time he said:

"We have spat in your face and we have insulted your women. What have we got to do now to make you cowardly Yankees fight?"

"The point of two guns at my shoulder blades reminded me that I dared resist the insult my finish and the finish of my seventeen comrades would be swift and certain.

"Most Mexicans have this impression of cowardice on the part of the United States. The newspapers freely publish tales of American losses, the invasion of the United States, the capture of New Orleans, battleships sunk with all on board. Such lies as these are spread in big headlines over the front pages. They believe we fear to fight them, and this impression is fostered by Huerta."

ACCUSED OF KILLING HUSBAND

Woman Said to Have Committed Crime to Prevent Exposure of Arson.

Louisville, Va., May 16.—Mrs. Victor Hall, widow of a young merchant shot to death in his home at Greenspring on April 15, was indicted for murder by a special grand jury which has been investigating the crime for five days.

Mrs. Hall, who was in the court house, having been taken into custody on a bench warrant, following a second attempt to burn down her home and store, was at once arrested, protesting her innocence. She was released on $5000 bail to appear for trial in July.

The indictment charges that Mrs. Hall shot her husband while he was in bed on the morning of April 15. The prosecution contends that she killed her husband because he threatened to expose her for setting fire to the store of W. R. Dunkum, a competitor, with whom she had quarreled. She asserts that a burglar had shot her husband.

GUNMAN'S WIDOW ADMITS PERJURY

Gave False Evidence at Becker
Trial to Save Husband.

HARRY VALLON IS GRILLED

Informant Admits Lying on Occasions
About Murder, But Sticks to Important Details.

New York, May 16.—Before Lefty Louie went to the death chair he made his young wife, Mrs. Louis Rosenberg, promise to tell the truth about the murder of Herman Rosenthal. So she took the stand, in her widow's black, in the trial of Charles Becker and told the jury that the gunmen knew they were working for Becker when they shot down Rosenthal and that she saw them divide the pay for the murder.

Mr. Manton did all that any lawyer could do to blunt the effect of that story when he asked her if she hadn't testified in the trial of the gunmen that she hadn't heard a word of the talk between her husband and Jack Rose, the time Rose went to hire the gunmen, but she turned her blue eyes on the foreman of the jury and spoke ten words:

"Well, I lied to save my husband at that time."

Harry Vallon, fellow conspirator with Jack Rose and others, underwent cross-examination. He admitted he had lied on many occasions in respect to the murder, but swore that his tale of the events leading up to the crime was correct in its essential details.

Counsel for the defense fired question after question at the witness in an endeavor to show that his testimony connecting Becker with the conspiracy was false. In no important points, however, was the story of the witness broken down by Martin T. Manton, Becker's counsel.

In direct examination Vallon corroborated the main points of Rose's story. He admitted under cross-examination that he had known Rosenthal for fifteen years and that they had a disagreement six months before Rosenthal was murdered. The witness denied, however, that he had quarreled with the murdered man. It is a contention of the defense that Rosenthal was a victim of a gamblers' war.

It is expected that Sam Schepps and Rosenthal's widow will be called by the state, and the district attorney is said to have new witnesses to aid the prosecution.

With the details of the murder plot before the jury as a result of the testimony of Rose and Bridget Webber, the district attorney recalled Vallon to the stand to complete his testimony. Vallon showed no trace of nervousness as he was questioned by the district attorney.

Vallon launched into the tale of the trip made with Rose to the house of Dora Gilbert, Rosenthal's former wife for the purpose of getting an affidavit that would hurt Rosenthal. It is the contention of the prosecution that Becker ordered this affidavit to be obtained. From the woman's home Vallon and his companions took the first automobile and relayed the party to the "murder car" which collected the gunmen.

"Who were in the car?" At Rose, Frank, Schepps and myself. At Forty second street and Sixth avenue Rose, Schepps, Frank and myself got out of the car. I saw Sam Paul there and went across the street to speak to him. I saw Whitey, Gyp and Lefty there. Then we went up into Bridge's place and sat at a table. Louie, Whitey, Frank, Gyp, Rose, Webber and myself were at the table."

"What did Webber do?" "He went out and came back in about fifteen minutes. Then Gyp, Whitey, Frank and Lefty went out. I stayed there about fifteen minutes and then walked out to Sixth avenue and up to Forty third street and turned on the south side of Forty-third street, going west. I stopped in front of the Elks club and heard shots. Then I saw the car passing, going west."

"Did you see Schepps?" "Yes, he came out to me on the street."

"Did you see Rosenthal's body that night?" "No."

Buys Peanuts, Then Kills Himself.

New York, May 16.—Immediately after buying five cents' worth of peanuts from a vendor near the Viaduct, at One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street, an unidentified man about twenty-five years old dived from the structure to the ground, a distance of seventy-five feet, and was instantly killed. The Viaduct is close to the Polo Grounds.

Rooster Attacks Child.

Hallstead, Pa., May 16.—The parents of Charles Oakley, three years old, think a bright red cap worn by the child provoked an attack on him by a large black Minorca rooster while he played in the yard near his home. Rushing on the child, the fowl knocked him down and dug its spurs into his cheeks.

The cessation of the labor of getting Pen-Mar park in readiness for the excursion season will not be long, said M. T. McNeal, traveling passenger agent Thursday evening. The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

(MRS. FALLIE ERMINIE RIVES POST WHEELER)
ILLUSTRATED BY LAUREN STOUT

Copyright 1914 by Dorros-McNeill Co.
SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—John Vallant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Vallant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed.

CHAPTER II—He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation.

CHAPTER III—His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia.

CHAPTER IV—He learns that this estate came into the family by royal grant and has been in the possession of the Vallants ever since.

CHAPTER V—On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an au-burn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely.

CHAPTER VI—An old negro tells Shirley's fortune and predicts great trouble for her on account of a man.

CHAPTER VII—Uncle Jefferson, an old negro, takes Vallant to Damory court.

CHAPTER VIII—Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Vallant's father, and a man named Sassoon, were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Vallant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed.

CHAPTER IX—Vallant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers, and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. Uncle Jefferson and his wife, Aunt Daphne, are engaged as servants.

CHAPTER X—Vallant explores his ancestral home. He is surprised by a fox hunting party which invades his estate. He recognizes Shirley at the head of the party.

CHAPTER XI—He gives sanctuary to the cornered fox. Gossips discuss the advent of the new owner and recall the tragedy in which the elder Vallant took part.

CHAPTER XII—Vallant decides to rehabilitate Damory court and make the land produce a living for him.

Shirley looked at Vallant with a deepening of her dimple. "Rickey isn't an aristocrat," she said; "she's what we call here poor-white, but she's got a heart of gold. She's an orphan, and the neighborhood in general, and Miss Mattie Sue Mabry in particular, have adopted her."

He hardly heard her words for the painful wonder that was holding him. His father had taken a man's life. Was it this thought—whatever the provocation—justified by the custom of the time and section—that had led to the tragedy? He recalled himself with an effort, for she was speaking again. "You've found Lovers' Leap, no doubt?"

"No. This is the first time I've been so far from the house. Is it near here?"

"I'll show it to you." She held out

"It Won't Hurt." Reassured the Would Be Operator.

her hand for the bunch of jessamine and laid it on the broad roots of a tree that were mottled with lichen. "Look there," she said suddenly; "isn't that a beauty?"

She was pointing to a jimson weed on which had settled, with glassy wings vibrating, a long, ungainly, needlelike insect with an odd sword-like beak. "What is that?" he asked. "A snake-doctor. If Uncle Jefferson were here he'd say, 'Bettah watch out! Dah's er snek roun' 'erbout heah, sho!' He'll fill you full of dark superstitions."

Suddenly the slim path between the trees took a quick turn, and fell away at their feet. "There," she said. "This is the finest view at Damory Court."

They stood on the edge of a stony ravine which widened at one end to a shallow marshy valley. The rocks were covered with gray-green feathery creepers, enwound with curly yellow tendrils of love-vine. Across the ravine, on a lower level, began a grove of splendid trees that marched up into the long stretch of neglected forest he had seen from the house.

"You love it?" he asked, without withdrawing his eyes.

"I've loved it all my life. I love everything about Damory Court. Ruined as it is, it is still one of the most beautiful estates in all Virginia. There's nothing finer even in Italy. Just behind us, where those hemlocks stand, is where the duel the children spoke of was fought."

He turned his head. "Tell me about it," he said.

She glanced at him curiously. "Didn't you know? That was the reason the place was abandoned. Vallant, who lived here, and the owner of another plantation, who was named Sassoon, quarreled. They fought, the story is, under those big hemlock trees. Sassoon was killed."

He looked out across the distance; he could not trust his face. "And—Vallant?"

"He went away the same day and never came back; he lived in New prehension. "Oh, how could you! You—" He nodded curtly. "Yes," he said. "I am that haphazard harlequin, John Vallant, himself."

CHAPTER XIV.

On the Edge of the World.

There was a pause not to be reckoned by minutes but suffocatingly long. She had grown as pale as he.

"That was ungenerous of you," she said then with icy slowness. "Though no doubt you found it entertaining. It must have still further amused you to be taken for an architect?"

"I am flattered," he replied, with a trace of bitterness, "to have suggested even for a moment, so worthy a calling."

At his answer she put out her hand with sudden gesture, as if bluntly thrusting the matter from her concern, and turning went back along the tree-shadowed path.

He followed glumly, gnawing his lip, wanting to say he knew not what, but wretchedly tongue-tied, noting that the great white moth was still waving its creamy wings on the dead stump and wondering if she would take the cape jessamines. He felt an embarrassed relief when, passing the roots where they lay, she stooped to raise them.

Then all at once the blood seemed to shrink from his heart. With a hoarse cry he leaped toward her, seized her wrist and roughly dragged her back, feeling as he did so, a sharp fiery sting on his instep. The next moment, with clenched teeth, he was viciously stamping his heel again and again, driving into the soft earth a twisting root-like something that slapped the brown wintered leaves into a hissing turmoil.

He had flung her from him with such violence that she had fallen sideways. Now she raised herself, kneeling in the feathery light, both hands clasped close to her breast, trembling excessively with loathing and feeling the dun earth-floor billow like a canvas sea in a theater. Little puffs of dust from the protesting ground were wreathing about her set face, and she pressed one hand against her shoulder to repress her shivers.

"The horrible—horrible—thing!" she said whisperingly. "It would have bitten me!"

He came toward her, panting, and grasping her hand, lifted her to her feet. He staggered slightly as he did so, and she saw his lips twist together oddly. "Ah," she gasped, "it bit you! It bit you!"

"No," he said, "I think not."

"Look! There on your ankle—that spot!"

"I did feel something, just that first moment." He laughed uncertainly. "It's queer. My foot's gone fast asleep."

Every remnant of color left her face. She had known a negro child who had died of a water-moccasin's bite some years before—the child of a house-servant. It had been wading in the creek in the gorge. The doctor had said then that if one of the other children.

She grasped his arm. "Sit down," she commanded, "here, on this log, and see."

Her pale fright caught him. He obeyed, dragged off the low shoe and bared the tingling spot. The firm white flesh was puffing up around two tiny blue-rimmed punctures. He reached into his pocket, then remembering that he had no knife. As the next best thing he knotted his handkerchief quickly above the ankle, thrust a stick through the loop and twisted it till the ligature cut deeply, while she knelt beside him, her lips moving soundlessly, saying over and over to herself words like these: "I must not be frightened. He doesn't realize the danger, but I do! I must be quite collected. It is a mile to the doctor's. I might run to the house and send Uncle Jefferson, but it would take too long. Besides, the doctor might not be there. There is no one to do anything but me."

She crouched beside him, putting her hands by his on the sick and wrenching it over with all her strength. "Tighter, tighter," she said. "It must be tighter." But, to her dismay, at the last turn the improvised cord snapped, and the released sick flew a dozen feet away.

Her heart leaped chokingly, then dropped into hammer-like thudding. He leaned back on one arm, trying to laugh, but she noted that his breath came shortly as if he had been running. "Absurd!" he said, frowning. "How such a fool thing—can hurt!"

Suddenly she threw herself on the ground and grasped the foot with both hands. He could see her face twitch with shuddering, and her eyes dilating with some determined purpose.

"What are you going to do?"

"This," she said, and he felt her shrinking lips, warm and tremulous, pressed hard against his instep.

He drew away sharply, with savage denial. "No! No! Not that! You shan't! My lord—you shan't!" He dragged his numbing foot from her desperate grasp, lifting himself, pushing her from him; but she fought with him, clinging, panting broken sentences:

"You must! It's the only way. It was—a moccasin, and it's deadly. Every minute counts!"

"I won't. No, stop! How do you know? It's not going to—here, listen! Take your hands away. Listen!—Listen! I can go to the house and send Uncle Jefferson for the doctor and he—No! stop, I say! Oh—I'm sorry if I hurt you. How strong you are!"

"Let me!"

"No! Your lips are not for that—good God, that damnable thing! You yourself might be—"

"Let me! Oh, how cruel you are! It was my fault. But for me it would never have—"

"No! I would rather—"

"Let me! Oh, if you died!"

With all the force of her strong young body she wrenched away his protesting hands. A thirst and a sickish feeling were upon him, a curious irresponsible giddiness, and her hair which that struggle had brought in tumbled masses about her shoulders, seemed to have little flames running all over it. His foot had entirely lost its feeling. There was a strange weakness in his limbs.

Moments of half-consciousness, or consciousness jumbled with strange imaginings, followed. At times he felt the pressure upon the wounded foot, was sensible of the suction of the young mouth striving desperately to draw the poison from the wound. From time to time he was conscious of a white desperate face haloed with hair that was a mist of woven sparkles. At times he thought himself a recumbent stone statue in a wood, and her a great tall golden-headed flower lying broken at his feet. Again he was a granite boulder and she a vine with yellow leaves winding and clinging about him. Then a blank—a sense of movement and of troublous disturbance, of insistent voices that called to him and inquisitive hands that plucked at him, and then voices growing distant again, and hands falling away, and at last—silence.

Tickling Trout.

Tickling trout is an ancient if not exactly honorable way of catching them. The hand is inserted in the water very cautiously under the fish when he is resting quietly with his head upstream and if the touch of the finger is light he will sometimes allow himself to be tickled slightly. When the hand is well under the fish he is flung out of the water over the "tickler's" shoulder.

A measure of more than usual importance to the agricultural interests of the country has lately passed the lower house of congress by a large majority. This bill provides for federal aid in the dissemination of scientific agricultural information through practical experiments and publications. Under the provisions of the bill state agricultural colleges are to receive funds to finance plans for acquainting farmers with facts established by the department of agriculture. Each state is to get $10,000 the first year, and this allowance is increased until at the end of ten years it will be $32,500 a year. Such an appropriation should make possible the rendering of a large and practical service for the important agricultural and allied interests of the country.

Blackleg is responsible for the death of more cattle than almost any disease to which they are subject. The disease cannot be cured, but in sections where it is prevalent cattle raisers usually guard against it by vaccination. The treatment renders an animal immune to the disease for a period of six months. The disease only affects cattle under two years of age. The appearance of the malady is accompanied by a loss of appetite, and the animal stops chewing its cud, gets lame in the joints and has a high fever, while painful swellings appear over the shoulders and flanks. These swellings spread rapidly and give a dry, crackling sound when rubbed with the hand. Blackleg is highly infectious, and animals that die of it should be buried or buried deep enough so that dogs or other animals will not be able to get at the carcasses.

MOHAIR STREET DRESS.

Smart Combination Suits Are Now the Vogue.

MOHAIR AND SILK SUIT.

The vogue for combinations of materials has taken the world of fashion by storm and shows itself in almost every outer garment, whether it be of silk or of cotton or of wool. In this suit blue mohair and plain silk are combined to make a most striking effect in the modish short jacket and the box plaited peplum. Since collars are the features of all smart garments here we have the regulation effect with a softening of lace. The right finishing touches are found in the wreath trimmed hat and the gray topped button boots.

WHITE GLOVES.

Keeping Them Clean When on the Way to Evening Affairs.

To appear in town, either in the evening or for daylight affairs, with spotless white gloves has always been one of the troubles of the suburban woman. Of course you may say she need not put on her white gloves till she arrives at the place for which she is bound, but it is not always practical to do this.

One woman has found a way—there always is a way out of every predicament—and she has kindly passed the idea on for the benefit of others. In the fall she purchases, usually at bargain sales, one or two pairs of white silk gloves, one-quarter size larger than the size of gloves she wears; these she draws over her white kid gloves and does not remove them until she reaches her destination. Silk gloves fit snugly over the kid ones and do not look so bulky as cotton ones would. They are easily stored away in her coat pocket until needed again.

Qualified in Part.

She was very literary and he was not. He had spent a harrowing evening discussing authors, of whom he knew nothing, and their books, of which he knew less. Presently the maiden asked, archly: "Of course, you've read 'Romeo and Juliet'?" He floundered helpless for a moment, and then, having a brilliant thought, blurted out, happily: "I've read 'Romeo'!"

FEAR ALLENTOWN BOY IS KIDNAPED

Walter Bossler, Aged 13, Disappears From School Yard.

Allentown, Pa., May 16.—Walter Bossler, the thirteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Bossler, has been missing since noon on Thursday and his parents fear that he has been kidnapped.

He was last seen in the yard of the school he attended. He had one particular chum, who lives several miles out of town, but the boy knows nothing of what has become of his friend.

The prostrated mother believes firmly that her son has been kidnapped, and his father, who is a furniture worker, is of the same belief.

The boy had no money when he disappeared, and this is regarded as an additional argument against his having left of his own volition.

He wore a brown coat, blue and white blouse, light trousers, black shoes and stockings and a light cap. He is small for his years.

Driver Stricken Blind.

Trenton, N. J., May 16.—August Wyckoff was stricken with blindness while driving a team of horses through the center of the city. The cause of the affliction has not been ascertained. His sight left him without warning, and he had to call to a passerby to stop the horses and assist him in getting from the wagon.

SEE HUERTA PLAN TO FORCE HOSTILITIES

Expect Him to Commit Overt Act to Start War.

Washington, May 16.—Administration officials see in the capture of Tampico by the rebels and other developments in the Mexican situation a chance that there may be no need for the army in Mexico after all.

Provisional President Huerta, according to these officials, is slowly being eliminated, much as the administration desires.

But this view is not accepted by the army officers. Huerta, they say, realizing that the rebels are closing in on him, and facing an uprising in his own army, is collecting all his remaining strength for hostilities with the United States. That he fully realizes his peril is not doubted in diplomatic circles, and neither is it doubted that he means to fight and die a "martyr."

Reports from General Funston, who organized an elaborate system for obtaining military information in Mexico, it is asserted, indicate that Huerta is making every preparation for a last stand at Puebla, a city which, by its geographical location, can be made most difficult to take by an attacking army.

The war department has abandoned the idea that Huerta plans to attack Vera Cruz. Instead, it is said, the department is expecting him to commit some overt act which will make it imperative for the United States to move against him. And with that eventuality in view, preparations for the quick departure of a huge army of invasion are being rushed, notwithstanding the hope of the president and Secretary Bryan that the Mexicans will settle their own troubles.

Certainly military preparations are going on rapidly. Orders recently issued by the war department for 6000 coast artillerymen stationed along the Atlantic coast to hold themselves in readiness for departure for the south have resulted in unusual activity. Arrangements are now so nearly complete that the men can be moved on short notice.

It is the intention of the government, it is said, to add two brigades to the troops intended for service in Mexico. Should they be ordered south the coast artillerymen will form provisional regiments of infantry.

ELECTRICITY.

And the Terms Energy, Pressure, Intensity and Quantity.

What is electricity? The question was put directly to Dr. Charles Proteus Steinmetz, the famous expert, in the hope that he—than whom no one knows more about it—might be able if not to tell what it is at least to give a definite idea of what it may be. Dr. Steinmetz replied:

"Electricity is a loose term, used miscellaneously in referring to all matters electrical.

"To give it definite meaning one must know whether reference is made to electrical energy, electrical pressure, electrical intensity or electrical quantity.

"Electrical quantity (represented in the electrical current) is generally assumed by scientists to be a substance with atomical structure, the unit of which is the electron.

"Electrical pressure is meant in referring to the voltage. Electrical intensity is the voltage per unit lengths.

"Magnetism is a similar term, which does not mean anything to the scientist. Two pieces of steel may have exactly the same structure as far as science can determine, and yet one may contain magnetic quantity and the other be without it, or the two may contain the same amount of magnetic quantity and have different magnetic intensity. Quantity times intensity equals energy.

"There may be the same quantity of water in two pipes and different pressure, or there may be the same pressure and different quantity. If water, the liquid, water pressure and water power were all loosely called water we should have the same confusion that the words electricity and magnetism suggest to the scientist.

"Is there such a thing as electricity?" he was asked.

"I cannot state positively that electrical quantity is a substance," Dr. Steinmetz replied, "or that there is such an atom as the electron. I say simply that this is the most commonly accepted theory."—New York World.

POE AND "THE RAVEN."

His Comment on the Tinkling Footfalls and the Bird's Shadow.

In a letter written on Dec. 15, 1846, to G. W. Everett of Phillips, Me., Edgar Allan Poe, in commenting on his famous poem, "The Raven," said:

"For the purpose of poetry it is quite sufficient that a thing is possible, or at least that the improbability be not of a severely glaring kind. It is true that in several ways, as you say, the lamp might have thrown the bird's shadow on the floor. My conception was that of the bracket candelabrum affixed against the walls, high up above the door and bust, as is often seen in the English palaces and even in some of the better houses in New York.

"Your objection to the tinkling of the footfalls is far more pointed and in the course of composition occurred so forcibly to myself that I hesitated to use the term. I finally used it, because I saw that it had, in its first conception, been suggested to my mind by the sense of the supernatural with which it was at the moment filled. No human or physical foot could tinkle on a soft carpet—therefore the tinkling of feet would vividly convey the supernatural impression.

"Your appreciation of 'The Sleeper' delights me. In higher qualities of poetry it is better than 'The Raven,' but there is not one man in a million who could be brought to agree with me in this opinion. 'The Raven,' of course, is far the better as a work of art—but in the true basis of all art 'The Sleeper' is the superior. I wrote the latter when quite a boy."

The Book of the Dead.

The ancient Egyptian "The Book of the Dead" is probably unique among books, inasmuch that it was intended for use not in this world, but in the next. It consists of a collection of prayers and exorcisms composed of various periods for recitation by the soul during its passage through hades and was indeed regarded as a safe conduct through that region. For this reason the Egyptians, who themselves entitled it Per-em-hru, "to go forth from day," buried a copy of the work, or portions of it, with their dead.—Westminster Gazette.

MAY RILMA, GREAT BUTTER PRODUCER

May Rilma, 22761, queen of the dairy world, was dropped Dec. 13, 1906, and is therefore in her eighth year. She was sired by Mars of Woodcrest, and her dam was Rilma of Paxtang.

May Rilma is American bred. When first entered for advanced registry under the rules of the American Guernsey Cattle club she produced in twelve months 12,145.6 pounds of milk, the test showing 580.67 pounds of butter fat. This led to her re-entry for the test just completed.

Profit in the careful treatment of May Rilma is shown by the following figures compiled by Mr. Cassatt:

May Rilma furnished 10,639.5 pounds of milk during 365 days of the test.

The Guernsey cow, May Rilma, owned by Captain Edward B. Cassatt, proprietor of the famous Chesterbrook farm at Berwyn, Pa., has given in 365 days 10,639.5 pounds of milk, which contained 1,665.56 pounds of butter fat. This cow was bred and raised at the farm, and her year's work has been carefully supervised under the regulations for the advanced register of Guernsey cattle conducted by the American Guernsey Cattle club. While officially supervised by the representatives of the Pennsylvania experiment station, her work has also been checked by six similar institutions in other states and by a representative of the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture. This record surpasses that of any cow of all the dairy breeds in the world.

This was sold at 6 cents a pound, so the cow brought in $1,178.37.

The daily feed of the cow was eighteen pounds of mixed grain ration, three pounds of beet pulp, three pounds of molasses, thirty pounds of ensilage and ten pounds of hay.

This sixty-four pounds of feed per day cost $3.995, a total of $255.31 for 365 days. During ninety-seven days of the test May Rilma was fed some carrots, the cost being altogether $15.52. So the cost of feeding the cow was $270.83.

CARE OF RUNTY PIGS.

Animals May Do Fairly Well if Carefully Looked After.

The hog man, no matter how careful he may be, always finds a few runty pigs on his hands when the time comes for weaning the litters in the early summer, says the Kansas Farmer. The number will depend to some extent upon the condition of the breeding herd, but perhaps more largely upon the care the sows and pigs have received during the suckling period. Every good hog man dislikes to see these runty pigs running around among the other pigs, and even though they are few in number they always seem more prominent than the good pigs of the litters.

The pig which is runty at weaning time will likely remain runty through the season unless he is given some extra care and attention. These pigs should by all means be culled out from the rest of the bunch and placed in a pasture or lot by themselves. They can then be given a little better feed and care and may possibly develop into fairly decent pigs. The rest of the bunch will look better at any rate, and this is no small matter to the breeder of pure bred hogs who oftentimes wishes to show visitors his stock. Giving the runts a little better chance will push them along so that they oftentimes can be disposed of on the market early and thus be out of the way.

Hog Pasture Question.

Experiments at the Iowa station indicate that rye furnishes very good hog pasture, but that the vetch is not worth much. For some reason the hogs do not seem to take to it. Oats and Canada field peas furnish very good hog pasture, but everything considered, rape alone is by far the best of all the annual hog pasture plants. Iowa experiments indicate conclusively that it is not worth while to use cowpeas, sorghum or soy beans as hog pasture when such a good plant as rape is available. Rape seeded in the spring and properly pastured will furnish good forage for hogs during June, July, August, September, October and part of November.

CHARLES A. HAWKINS
For Congress

The May Primary presents an opportunity for Democratic voters to place their party in a position to gain the respect and attract the support of good citizens. President Wilson's high ideals, wise statesmanship and unswerving loyalty to moral principles are the only elements upon which any hope can be based of future Democratic success.

No candidate could be found who would not promise to support President Wilson. The man should be nominated who is most nearly of the Wilson type.

Candidates ought to receive no consideration who notoriously are only the representatives of different factions of quarreling politicians, whose want of principle and whose discreditable practices have been an open shame. Bosses and their tools, and political traders are not in harmony with the Wilson brand of Democracy.

Charles A. Hawkins is the candidate whose education and ability enables him to understand and intelligently support and defend the great purposes of the Progressive Democracy. His character and record as a lawyer, farmer and citizen are guaranty of scrupulous, honest and unswerving devotion to the fundamental principles of true Democracy.

His nomination would mean his election by an overwhelming majority; and the stain of corrupt bossism would be removed from York County.

A Vindication

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

When I arrived at my aunt's country place to make her a visit I found the family much put out about something which had occurred. Ralph Townsend, who had been paying attention to my Cousin Bess, had gone away under a cloud, and my aunt said that it was fortunate he had been found out before it was too late. Bess was in a perpetual state of tears, and the prospects for my having a pleasant visit were very poor.

In time I learned what the trouble was. A gold watch belonging to my Cousin John and other articles belonging to various members of the family were missing. One of them—a brooch—had been found in the pocket of Ralph's dress coat hanging in the closet of his bedroom. When informed of the fact, without making any defense he put his belongings into his suit case and left the house.

I possess one faculty which is more common to my sex than to men, I think. I judge persons instinctively. Besides, we women can see through one another far better than men can see through us. There was a girl in the house, a general friend of the family, Edna Pettit, whom I did not like. I could give no reason for my dislike, but it was just as strong as if I could give a thousand. On the other hand, I had met Ralph Townsend once, and, although I had not exchanged a word with him, I had been very favorably impressed with him.

Perhaps this antipathy and this liking would not be considered evidence in a court of law, but it was good enough for me. I argued that something had been going on between Edna and Ralph; that Ralph had incurred her hatred, and she had taken revenge upon him by purloining certain articles and putting one of them in his pocket. He was too much of a man to attack a woman. He couldn't prove anything against her anyway, and there was nothing to do but to go away without making a defense. I believed that he knew whence came the stigma that had been fastened upon him.

I flatter myself that for reasoning based entirely on feeling the above is pretty good. I don't know any man who could do better. Having fixed upon the guilty one—in my own mind—I laid my plans to expose her. But, though feeling might have led me in the right direction, it is not reliable in a demonstration. Nevertheless I put myself in Edna's place and thought what I would do if I had played the game I believed she had played. I felt sure that I would not hide any of the stolen articles in my own room. I thought it improbable that they would be found in the room of any one else, since if they were stolen to ruin Ralph there would probably be no reason to ruin any other person.

My aunt's house was a large one with a good many bedrooms. During my visit three rooms remained unoccupied. Two were on the floor where women guests were lodged and one where men slept. It occurred to me that the missing articles, if in the house, would be hidden in one of these vacant rooms. On the night of my arrival I began to make investigations. After midnight I stole into one of the unoccupied woman's rooms with an electric lamp and made a thorough search, looking especially between the mattresses of the bed. I found nothing.

The next night I visited the other vacant room in the women's quarters with the same result. There was a sofa near a window, and the night being hot, I lay down on the lounge to think. I had scarcely done so when I heard a ticking.

Rising, I examined the lounge, but could not see how a watch could have got inside of it. I lay down again, and presently it occurred to me that the lounge was constructed to open and shut. Getting up again, I felt it till I found that I could lift the part on which I had been lying. Inside by the light of my lamp I found the watch I had heard. I recognized it as my aunt's. In a small box I found other missing articles.

Now that I had found the stolen property it remained for me to find the thief. I concentrated my attention upon Edna Pettit. I had no idea what she would do in the matter, whether she would suffer the articles to remain where they were or take them away. Every night I went from my room to the one where I had found the stolen goods and slept—when I did sleep—very comfortably on some blankets under the bed, first satisfying myself that the articles were still under the lounge.

The night before Edna was to take her departure while sleeping under the bed I was awakened by some one coming into the room. I didn't know who it was, but, stealing from my hiding place, I locked the door. Then, flashing my electric lamp about, I struck the object of my suspicions. By promising no public exposure, provided she would sign a confession, I relieved Ralph Townsend from all blame. We found a desk with some paper and pencils and I took the confession before I would permit her to leave the room. I asked her if she had come there to take away the property and she said she had determined that the best thing she could do was to leave it there, but had come for one article she coveted for herself.

The next morning she left without her hosts knowing about my discovery. When I told them it brought great astonishment to all and great joy to Bess. Ralph Townsend was sent for at once and returned that evening.
